3 b) one policy they should have is data security. They should make sure only authorized people see the data and that it is not given to anyone else.

A second policy should be about how the information is collected and who puts it in the database. ~~This~~ This information should be done by authorized people (police?) and verified it is correct.

A third policy would be data integrity. It is important that the data is verified so that innocent people don't get in trouble. People should be able to view their own information to check and see if it is valid.

3 c) There are many uses of the business traveller's website that can be an advantage but also disadvantages.

The positives would be the easy access to information right away. You don't have to wait for it as it would be online and easy to access. It would also be accurate and up to date as websites can be easily updated by the government. RSS feeds also provide a convenient way to get this info from the website making it even more convenient.

However, there are also

Some disadvantages of having to use a website. What if you don't have a computer or internet access? or what if you are travelling and the cost for internet access is expensive. It would make it difficult for the traveller to get the travel warnings and advice they need. As well, what if the government 'didn't update it as often as they should. The traveller wouldn't know if it is accurate (unless they use a timestamp to stay "updated on "Jan 30, 2022")

~~Someone~~ finding out their contact info is also a disadvantage. While there are lots of advantages, there are also disadvantages to using a website. Travellers should use the site but be aware of the disadvantages such as outdated info, website is down or no internet access. And they shouldn't give their personal info.
